What is the heart of our work in the medical profession? How do we maintain focus on it with our competing academic and professional demands? How do we keep care front and center and communicate it clearly? Together, we begin to answer these questions through a performance of Playback Theatre, a dramatic improvisational technique in which stories from the audience form the basis of a new common story in which hidden perspectives and essential elements of each story are artfully revealed. The performance-forum provides a unique opportunity to test your own medical model and develop the core of care in your professional work.

Presented by:

Chris Fitz, B.A., M.A.
Founder and Director of River Crossing Playback Theatre

April 5, 2013
12 - 1:00 p.m.
Room: C2860
BMR Building, Anesthesia Library,
Penn State College of Medicine
500 University Drive, Hershey, PA

For more info call (717) 531-8778